

Answer key

Brinegar Cabin before restoration	Brinegar Cabin after restoration
<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• The cabin is in a state of disrepair.</li><li>• The cabin is sagging in the middle.</li><li>• The trees and grass are not groomed.</li><li>• The door and windows are missing.</li><li>• The roof is falling apart.</li></ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• The cabin looks to be in good shape.</li><li>• The cabin is no longer sagging in the middle.</li><li>• A porch has been added to the front.</li><li>• Landscaping has been done to remove some trees, and the grass looks like it has been mowed.</li><li>• A door and windows have been added.</li><li>• The roof has been repaired.</li><li>• There is a walkway on the side of the house.</li></ul>

Additional notes:

- Some buildings were renovated to create a certain rustic look so they would fit in with the countryside and appeal to visitors.
- Houses were removed if they were in too much disrepair. Houses that were falling apart too much would not have been appealing to visitors.
- Some houses were removed if they would not fit in with the overall image the planners of the Parkway wanted to portray.
- Some houses and buildings were moved in order to make room for the Parkway.
- Signs along the Parkway were made from natural materials and had rough edges to fit in with the natural scenery.
- Equipment used to maintain the Parkway is hidden away from view when not in use so that tourists don't see it and so it doesn't disrupt the natural environment.